

ENVOYS, FLOUTED, INDIGNANT IN CHINA; SITUATION IS GRAVE

Held Up by Troops When They Attempt to Make Protest.

MANY ARE VICTIMS OF SOLDIER-ROBBERS

Much Uneasiness at Peking; Kuominchun and Shansi Forces Near Clash.

Peking, June 10 (A.P.).—Grave issues between the foreign diplomatic body and the Nationalist military forces are stated to be involved in a situation which arose today when troops of Marshal Feng Yu-Hsiang violated what was said to be an agreement of the Nationalist government by disarming and making prisoners of retreating troops.

A strongly worded note has been dispatched to the Nationalist government at Nanking protesting against the incident which resulted after the troops of Feng, a Nationalist ally, drove back to Peking disarmed and made prisoners of the troops of Gen. Pao Yu-Lin which had been retained in Peking with the consent of the Nationalist government for the purpose of strengthening the local police force.

Pao Yu-Lin's brigade was withdrawing peacefully, its mission having been fulfilled, when it was intercepted at Tungchow by a detachment of Feng Yu-Hsiang forces, surrounded and marched back to the city.

Ministers Held Up by Troops. After a hurried meeting of the diplomatic corps, which considered itself responsible for the safety of Pao's troops, the British, American, Japanese and Dutch ministers, accompanied by their Chinese secretaries and military attaches in full uniform, hurried to Pao Yu-Lin's camp and endeavored to settle the affair with the Nationalist commander without success.

At Nanyuen, 15 miles away, they interviewed Gen. Han Fu-Chu, who is Feng Yu-Hsiang's Peking commander. Han's attitude was described as very truculent. He said he had received orders from Feng to make the entire force prisoners. He was a military man, he explained to the diplomats and had dealt with the situation in a military manner. After several hours of fruitless remonstrance the ministers returned to Peking where they were held up for some time by Nationalist troops before being allowed to enter the city gates.

A strongly worded note was immediately dispatched to Nanking recounting the affair and describing the visit to Nanyuen, where they set forth they were flouted by a subordinate general and forced to carry on their negotiations in a small outhouse under a scorching sun. The note concluded by emphasizing that Han Fu-chu had refused to abide by terms of the Nationalist government agreement and pointing out the seriousness of the issues involved.

Peking Virtually Surrounded. The incident has created a wave of indignation among foreigners and the Shansi troops, which have been here for several days, taking over the city immediately after the departure of Chang Tso-lin, the Manchurian warlord. The committee of public safety resigned when the affair became known.

It is understood that Pao Yu-Lin is a refugee in the legation quarter. Peking is virtually surrounded by Feng Yu-Hsiang's troops, and it is estimated that they outnumber the Shansi forces two to one.

Feng May Rule City.

Beking, June 10 (Via Naval Radio) (A.P.).—Indications were increasing tonight that Feng Yu-Hsiang, the so-called "Christian general," himself will take over the control of Peking in the near future, although possibly he will wait until he has occupied Tientsin. Immediately north of Tientsin fighting was reported to be in progress today. Peking stands tonight with communication severed as far as telegraphic service was concerned. The highways from the city were no longer safe for automobile travel owing to bandit troops robbing all travelers, even those bearing diplomatic credentials.

The additional concentration of Feng Yu-Hsiang's Kuominchun troops, if the Christian general determines to occupy Peking, will place the Shansi forces who entered the city after Chang Tso-lin's withdrawal within a circle with their backs against the walls of the capital.

These developments have caused the Shansi governor, Yen Hsi Shan to postpone for another two days his coming to Peking to assume charge of the city. He sent word to the city safety committee that his delay was due to bad roads which rendered motor travel difficult.

Rumors Causing Uneasiness. The Nationalist government at Nanking has as yet not replied to the message of the diplomatic corps' had faith in connection with the capture of Gen. Pao Yu-Lin's Forty-seventh Mukdenite brigade. Rumors were rife

BAVARIAN TRAIN WRECK KILLS 25; 108 INJURED

Munich-to-Cologne Express Burns After Plunge From High Embankment.

MANY VICTIMS SCALDED

(Special Cable Dispatch.) Berlin, June 10.—Twenty-five were killed and 108 injured when the Munich-Cologne express was derailed between Nuremberg and Würzburg, Bavaria, at 3 a. m. today. The American travelers were uninjured, as they all were in the rear portion of the train, which remained on the track.

The cause of the disaster is not known but an outrage is hinted. It is a curious coincidence that the place of the disaster is the same spot where two attempts at train wrecking were made two years ago, for which one man is now undergoing a prison sentence of 15 years.

The express was traveling at 50 miles an hour when the engine jumped the rails and rolled down a 35-foot embankment, dragging seven coaches headlong to destruction. Indescribable horror was added to the scene by the fact that volumes of steam escaping from the overturned locomotive poured into one of the coaches, scalding all the occupants beyond recognition.

Marvelous rescues were reported among them that of the fireman, who jumped off the locomotive while it was scorching and escaped with bruises. A passenger who was dug out of a coach after six hours of work proved to be uninjured, though all the others in the car were dead.

Anti-Fascists Bomb Italian Agent's Home

Buenos Aires, June 10 (A.P.).—Another anti-Fascist bomb was exploded today in the house of the Italian consular agent at Zarate, says dispatch from that town. No one was hurt and the property damage was small. This is the same locality in which a bomb was exploded recently in the dwelling of an Italian physician. That explosion also was without serious consequences.

HONDURANS RAID, ROB THROUGH NICARAGUA

Sandino Leaders Maltreat Citizens and Loot Store, Is Marine Report.

Managua, Nicaragua, June 10 (A.P.).—More depredations by Sandino forces under Porfirio Sanchez and Antonio Galeano have been reported to marine headquarters here from the base near San Juan de Telepaneca. They raided a town on May 27, maltreated two peaceful citizens, looted a store and took $200. The next day they robbed a Nicaraguan on the highway near San Lucas.

Both of these leaders are Hondurans. Sandino has spoken of Galeano in letters as the captain commanding a group which attacked a patrol under Lieut. O'Shea in October. This patrol was searching for Lieut. E. A. Thomas, an aviator who crashed in Nueva Segovia and was killed by bandits. Galeano now holds the rank of colonel in the Sandino organization.

Recently captured documents speak of Sanchez as a "general," and they indicate that Sandino has made him a member of his staff.

Awakened by Burglar, Merchant Is Killed

San Diego, Calif., June 10 (A.P.).—Emil Silverman, 56, a retired dry goods merchant of New York City, was shot and instantly killed at his home in Chula Vista, San Diego suburb, early today when he awakened shortly after 3 a. m. and found a burglar in his house.

2 OF NOBILE'S MEN HURT; CREW DIVIDES TRAVELING OVER ICE

Stronger Believed Trying to Reach Ships and Guide Rescuers.

OPEN WATER AMIDST FLOES' ADDED PERILS

Dirigible's Company Drifting East and West as They Seek to Reach Land.

Kings Bay, Spitzbergen, June 10 (A.P.).—Bearing two of their number who were injured when the Italia came down on the ice of the Arctic Ocean, the crew of the big dirigible are making perilous progress toward land. The eighteen men have divided a few of the stronger to reach the rescue ships and guide the relief expeditions back to the main body.

Open water leads among the floes are making the progress slow and dangerous. At times the men are borne out of their course as the wind or sea currents drift the floes east or south. When the drift is toward the west, there is that much gain for the refugees.

Boats to get them from their predicament constitute the need of the moment. The crew has provisions for six weeks.

All this was revealed in radio conversations last night and today. The Citta di Milano kept in constant touch with Gen. Nobile's men. Each message, however, accentuated the peril and the necessity for speed in rescue.

In the face of this condition, Capt. Romanga, of the Citta di Milano, has asked the Italian Minister to Norway to request aid of the Russian government.

Russia possesses the most powerful ice breakers in the Arctic. Word has also been dispatched to Milan to hasten the departure of the big Italian seaplane the Savoia-55.

Capt. Riser-Larsen, Norwegian ace explains that the planes which he and Lieut. Holm brought to Spitzbergen have not space to carry supplies sufficient for the eighteen refugees. He and the lieutenant, however, are making every effort to get in touch with the marooned men.

Capt. Riser-Larsen today flew his plane from Spitzbergen and joined Lieut. Holm on the sealer Hobby. But ice packed in around that vessel and prevented them from taking off for the spot. In the Arctic Ocean where the Italia's crew is stranded.

He also recalled the ice breaker Braganza to Kings Bay, so that it might fit out as a base ship for the two Norwegian aviators. But ice conditions also have prevented that vessel from making headway.

MAN FOUND HANGING WITH SHOT IN BRAIN

Virginian's Body Discovered by Son in Barn Near Pohick Church.

The body of Ernest Sims, 61 years old, of Fairfax County, Va., was found in the barn on his farm near the Pohick Church yesterday afternoon by his son John, hanging from the rafters with a noose around his neck and a bullet wound in his right temple. A 38-caliber pistol was found nearby. Coroner C. A. Ransom, of Fairfax County, issued a certificate of suicide.

Sims, a widower, is said to have grieved over the death of his wife which occurred about a year ago and had threatened to take his life on several occasions, according to neighbors. Going into his barn shortly after 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon Sims constructed a noose, suspended it to the rafters, tied it around his neck, stood on a wagon tongue and fired one shot into his brain, according to Coroner Ransom. The body was found an hour later by his son hanging a few inches above the barn floor.

Sims is survived by his son, two brothers and a sister. Funeral services will be held in Pohick Church tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. Burial will be in the Pohick Cemetery.

MABEL BOLL PREPARES FOR TAKE-OFF TODAY

Orders Plane Brought From Hangar in Early Hours of the Morning.

RAIN IS BLOCKING STULTZ

Curtiss Field, N. Y., June 10 (A.P.). Mabel Boll announced tonight that she would take-off in the Bellanca monoplane Columbia at 5 a. m. tomorrow on her projected transatlantic flight. She would not say whether the plane would be headed directly for Europe or make an intermediate stop at Old Orchard, Maine.

The fact that a number of specially constructed auxiliary gasoline tanks had been filled and packed into the plane was taken to indicate the possibility of a direct start for Europe from the Roosevelt Field runway, which will be used by the Columbia for the hop-off.

Miss Boll retired after announcing her intention to fly, leaving instructions that she not be disturbed until 4:30 a. m. She said weather forecasts for the Long Island flying fields indicated favorable conditions for a take-off.

Tonight mechanics said two hours' work would complete fueling of the plane and it would be taken out of the hangar at 4:30 a. m.

Trappesay, N. F., June 10 (A.P.).—Chance that the monoplane Friendship might take off for Europe tomorrow morning became slight late tonight as an increasing fog brought with it a heavy rain. The three members of the Friendship crew—Miss Amelia Earhart, Boston aviatrix; Wilmer Stultz and Louis Gordon—had hoped that they might be able to start on their flight at dawn tomorrow.

Duchess Takes Off On Flight to India

London, June 10 (A.P.).—Mary, Duchess of Bedford, 62-year-old enthusiastic aviatrix, took off yesterday with Capt. C. D. Barnard in the airplane, Princess Kenya, on a flight to Lympne, India. The plane is the one in which Capt. Macintosh planned to fly the Atlantic last year and in which he was forced down in Poland when he attempted a nonstop flight to India.

RAILWAY MOTOR CAR WRECKED; 30 HURT

Majority of Those Injured Are Students in University of Mississippi

Oxford, Miss., June 10 (A.P.).—Thirty persons were injured, 16 seriously, when an Illinois Central motor car plunged into a deep washout 2½ miles south of here tonight. The car turned over twice and finally settled in about 15 feet of water.

The injured, most of whom are students at the University of Mississippi here, were rushed to Oxford hospitals for emergency treatment.

Dr. N. D. Bond, university instructor, leaped to safety and brought news of the disaster here. J. J. Lenoir, McComb, Miss., student at the university, and Dorris Johnson, Water Valley, Miss., were seriously injured.

Waiting for Things to Happen, Delegates Hide Idleness in Air of Intrigue.

By CARLISLE BARGERON (Staff Correspondent of The Post). Kansas City, Mo., June 10.—The Republican national convention is standing around on its feet in the hotel lobbies waiting for the balloting to begin. The great majority of the crowd is saying that it will be Coolidge unless he says something, and that if he does it will be Hoover.

But in the possibility of his not saying anything and the possible confusion that such an attitude may create, it is generally agreed that anything may happen. In the meantime, the delegates, hangers-on, lobbyists and camp followers are just standing around with an air of intrigue, but really doing nothing at all.

A serenading band has just come to play in the lobby of the Hotel Muehlbach. The chairs have been removed in order that there may be more room and, too, to discourage the visitors from tarrying too long. The lighted chandeliers are glittering. Fashionably gowned women are sitting in the balcony and standing in the lobby with their starched skirts and feet in rhythm with the music and contemplating the glamour of the business of nominating Presidents.

Friend of Coolidge. There is James B. Reynolds, very spry, in a dinner suit, round, amiable and answering all questions as to what he thinks the President would do in the event the nomination was tendered to him, with "no man has ever run from the Presidency." Presumably there are few who know the President better than Mr. Reynolds. A product of effete Boston, he is advertised as the man "who knew Mr. Coolidge."

Despite his jovial, apparently easy-going disposition, Mr. Reynolds knows his politics. So a lot of delegates are paying heed to what he says about no man running from the Presidency.

There is E. F. Colladay, national committeeman from the District of Columbia. He, too, is attired in a dinner suit, and is having trouble getting tickets for all those who come

Increased Tariff on Food Is Promised in Platform

Tentative Draft Virtually Complete, But Fight May Start on Flexible Provision—Coolidge Economy and Achievements at Home and Abroad Praised.

By ARTHUR W. CRAWFORD.

Special to The Washington Post.

Kansas City, Mo., June 10.—Revision of tariff rates, particularly on farm products, is to be promised in the Republican platform, the tentative draft of which was virtually completed today.

The tariff plank was given final scrutiny at a conference between Senator Smoot, Utah, who is to be the chairman of the resolutions committee, and Undersecretary of the Treasury Ogden Mills, who is slated for membership on the resolutions committee as the representative of the State of New York.

As in past years the Republicans expect to emphasize the tariff as a major issue. The tentative plank reiterates belief of the party in protection as a national policy, with due and equal regard to all sections and to agriculture, industries and occupations. Tariff protection of industries, it is declared, tends toward increased consumption of agricultural products by an employed population, as well as guards against an invasion of cheap foreign-made goods.

With respect to agricultural products, the plank will propose an upward revision of rates. This provision is designed to make possible increased duties on a long list of farm commodities which were included in the emergency tariff measure which Senator Shipstead, Farm-Labor, Minnesota, sought to add as a rider to the tax-reduction bill in the Senate.

The Republican regulars who expect to control the resolutions committee are willing to go as far as the farm groups desire in way of promising higher duties on farm products. They intend to make no concessions, however, to the radicals who seek a scaling down of duties on manufactured goods which the farmer must buy. The regulars contend that exemption from duty already is provided on most farm implements and on many other commodities which are necessary in connection with agriculture. To go any farther in this direction, it is argued, would work an injury to American industry.

Some attempts will be made to broaden the tariff plank to provide for the repeal of the flexible section of the Fordney-McCumber act of 1922. The 1924 platform declared its approval of the flexible provision which was originally adopted in 1912.

Mellon Is Non-Committal On Keystone State's Stand

On board the Pennsylvania delegation special train, en route to Kansas City, June 10 (A.P.).—Secretary of the Treasury A. W. Mellon, speeding westward on a special train to the Kansas City convention tonight, told newspapermen he had not changed his position so far as the presidential nomination was concerned.

Reiterating previous statements that the big Pennsylvania delegation should hold itself unpledged, so as to give it freedom of action at the Kansas City caucus, the Secretary, recognized as holding the key position in the convention, delivered noncommittal answers to practically all questions put to him by reporters.

Asked who would be nominated, Mellon, seated in the parlor of his private car with Gov. John S. Fisher of Pennsylvania; W. L. Mellon, State Republican leader, and the Secretary's nephew and others, smilingly said:

"I would like to know myself."

Asked who the Pennsylvania delegates would vote for on the first or second ballot, he said:

"We are having our caucus at Kansas City Tuesday morning and our plans will be determined then."

He added that even if he could say just who would receive the first vote it would be appropriate for him to do so.

"I cannot answer," the Secretary replied, when asked if President Coolidge would accept the nomination.

The same answer met the questioners when they sought to ascertain if Mellon was hopeful that Coolidge would accept and as to what he thought of Hoover's chances. To the last question he added:

"What I mean is I do not want to make any statement at this time as to my position."

Asked if he carried any message to the convention from President Coolidge, the Secretary replied in the negative.

Keystone State's Vote Expected to Decide Early Choice.

MIDWESTERN CHIEFS ON FIELD IN PERSON

Platform Builders Are Busy as Commerce Secretary's Men Radiate Hope.

By JAMES L. WILLIAMS

Kansas City, Mo., June 10 (A.P.).—Andrew W. Mellon sped westward tonight with the 79 Pennsylvania delegates to the Republican national convention, holding in his hands the votes which will in all probability decide whether Herbert Hoover will be nominated for President of the United States on an early ballot.

The Hoover people, radiating confidence, are claiming tonight on all sides that the fight is over. They even believe there is a fine opportunity to nominate the Commerce Secretary on the first ballot. The candidates allied against Hoover, fighting desperately with their backs to the wall, smile grimly over the optimism in the opposition camp and say "Wait."

Mellon's trip westward was accompanied in Kansas City by rumors of every description as to his plans. The grumpy, mustached financial genius of the administration, always hesitant in speech, is saying nothing, and the answer to all of the conjecturing probably will be given when the clerk of the national convention reaches Pennsylvania on the roll call. Should the answer be "Hoover" on an early ballot, as Hoover's friends confidently predict, the decision will have been made. With the huge block of votes carried by the Keystone State, the Secretary's margin would be ample to make him the nominee.

Favorite Sons First.

The suggestion is being advanced in Hoover quarters tonight that some favorite sons may have opportunity to be duly honored on the first ballot and that Hoover even then might be chosen on the same roll call. They reason that when the roll is finished, regardless of Pennsylvania's vote, there will be so close to victory that State delegations, who have voted for favorite sons, may still change their votes to Hoover.

Hoover supporters, who are opposing the injection into the proceedings of the Coolidge figure, tonight were arguing that the President needed no complimentary vote, because it was conceded that he could have had the nomination if he had so desired. None professed to know of any message from the President which might suddenly be presented to the convention or to the party leaders to remove all doubt as to the Coolidge wishes.

The allies made up of the Lowden-Watson-Curtis-Goff groups, are battling for their cause valiantly. They still profess to believe that Hoover cannot be nominated because of his agricultural record, and are placing their faith in some contingency which they say will arise to make his selection impossible. Anti-Hoover rallies are the order of the day and night, with the agricultural question the chief point of argument.

Aspirants on the Ground.

Lowden, Watson, Curtis and Goff are personal charges of their boards of strategy here. Curtis, who arrived today, declared himself still confident of victory. The Kansas Secretary's managers held that he was not anti-Hoover, but, rather, pro-Curtis, and an admirable compromise in the convulsion battle which they foresee.

Persons visiting Hoover headquarters seeking information as to what Hoover might do in the event of a stampede for Coolidge can find no one to argue with them. It is made very clear that Hoover is not running against Coolidge.

The Hoover men are claiming a certain 51½ votes on the first ballot, or 30 short of the necessary majority. These claims are vigorously challenged in the rival camps, where Lowden is leading with 29½; claimed as certain, in addition the former Illinois governor, as well as the other anti-Hoover candidates, hopes to overturn the ruling of the Republican national committee in seating 65 Hoover delegates last week from contested States, and Lowden expects other caucuses to his cause, notably from Nebraska, where Norris is the choice.

The plan of little of the rival groups in the convention, has not really been unfolded, except that it is apparent that the Hoover managers want a victory as quickly as they can get it, and the anti-Hoover group will seek to prevent such an outcome. With Hoover eliminated they would be expected to give others a chance.

Dawes' Name Little Heard.

Strangely enough, the name of Vice President Dawes, who has been a lifelong friend of Lowden, to whom many awarded the Lowden strength in case of a deadlock, has not been overly prominent in the delegate discussion, so far as outward appearances show. Neither has that of Charles Evans

CAMPAIGN QUIZZES
PARIED BY LOWDEN
WITH FARM RELIEFAsks if Leaders Are Agreed on Plank; Has Nothing to Say on Plans.DENEEN IS HIS GUEST AT BREAKFAST TABLEIllinois's Headquarters Is Hopeful; Sure Hoover Will Be Beaten, Anyway.

Kansas City, June 10 (A.P.).—Frank Lowden, who bases his presidential aspirations on the farm vote of the Middle West, looked out over the convention panorama today with hope that the uncertain situation still might turn toward him the tide of victory.

The candidate, who has placed himself at the head of a large group of farmer interests, kept up the fighting spirit in his followers and adjured them that "everything is not yet over," in spite of the commanding position enjoyed by Herbert Hoover for the party's presidential nomination.

As if to prove his statement yesterday that he is "a thousand times more interested" in the position the party takes on farm relief than in his own candidacy, the former Illinois Governor parried allusions to his campaign for the presidency with questions as to how the farm situation was shaping up.

"Have the farm leaders reached an agreement on the plank they will offer to the convention?" he asked.

Sees Principle in Plank.

He was told that the leaders hoped to complete their work tomorrow and seemed to turn over in his mind the information that their plank would not include the words "McNary-Haugen" nor "equalization" fee.

"But it will declare for the principles of that bill, will it not?" It was a declaration rather than a question.

The governor, as every one calls him, had no word about his plans. He was spending most of his time in his hotel apartment "meeting somebody continually."

"They come through here about one a minute," he said. "They talk mostly politics. You know how it goes. One of the few who had more than a minute with the governor this morning was Senator Deneen, of Illinois, who came in just as Lowden was about to tackle a grapefruit."

It seemed that the bulk of the conversation had to do with the poor quality of grapefruit at this time of the year.

Since Deneen is a strong Lowden man, no one had any idea that the possibility of Deneen's nomination for President in the event the convention deadlocked, was discussed. Some other Illinoisans, however, tipped Lowden off on the talk of offering the senator for Vice President.

Mrs. Lowden Present.

During the brief and sparse intervals of callers, Mrs. Lowden, who was feeling badly when she arrived in Kansas City with her husband yesterday, joined the governor in the parlor of their suite.

She appeared entirely well, if a little tired, and greeted her husband's callers as affably as did he.

"I am feeling really very well," she said, just before retiring to leave the governor and his caller alone.

The governor seemed interested in news of the march of farmers upon the convention city to demand a strong farm plank and a Middle Western candidate, but he had nothing to say about the pilgrimage. Neither he nor any one here, for that matter, had any very definite information as to the size of the pilgrimage.

The so-called farmers headquarters said they expected a large crowd, just how many would not be known until tomorrow, Gov. Sorlie, of North Dakota, it was said, was bringing a long caravan which might gather 5,000 before it reached Kansas City.

Lowden Workers Active.

Farm leaders meanwhile awaited the arrival of additional spokesmen for the farmers before reaching a definite conclusion on the wording of the plank.

They were agreed, however, that the principles of the McNary-Haugen bill and its equalization fee methods of defraying the cost controlling crop surpluses would be espoused even though not mentioned by name.

If things were stirring at Lowden's apartment, another word would have to be found to describe the situation at his headquarters. The Lowden workers milled about and jostled each other, but the talk seemed to be more

RUNS CAMPAIGN

MISS CONSTANCE MARSHALL.

Columbus, Ohio (A.P.).—Miss Constance Marshall, daughter of Carrington T. Marshall, chief justice of the Ohio Supreme Court, says she is not a politician, but is willing to learn some politics.

So she is managing her father's State headquarters in his campaign for the Republican nomination for United States senator to succeed the late Senator Frank B. Willis.

"I don't know much about politics but I expect I will learn considerable before the campaign is over, as it looks as though it is going to be a nice scrap," she said.

REED INVADES G. O. P.
QUARTERS AS HOST

Foe of Republicans Given
Hearty Reception by Curtis and Others.

Kansas City, June 10 (A.P.).—A Democratic presidential candidate, Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri, invaded the quarters of Republican delegates today and got a hearty reception. Archibald of the Republicans.

Reed found himself a host to that party upon his arrival here yesterday.

Reed paid his respects to the Republicans today, first calling on Senator Curtis, of Kansas, the Republican leader and one of the candidates. The two were together for some time and both smiled when asked if the discussion included the "stop Hoover" campaign.

Reed has been among the most severe critics of the Commerce Secretary.

As he walked through the lobby of the Muehlebach Hotel, filled with Republican leaders, Senator Reed, accompanied by his friend, Charles Howell, frequently was stopped for a chummy greeting. Asked what he meant by coming into the Republican lair, Reed smiled and jokingly replied, "just trying to raise the average."

THOMAS ASKS LABOR TO HELP SOCIALISTS

Smith and Hoover Are Allied
With Capital, He Says,
Opening Campaign.

Chicago, June 10 (A.P.).—Firing a broadside against Republican and Democratic leaders "being sold to labor as progressives on terms that make progressivism look very mild," Norman Thomas, Socialist, presidential candidate, opened his campaign today with a speech before a gathering of Socialists.

Thomas attacked Gov. Al Smith, a Herbert Hoover for their alleged alliance with capitalism and Wall Street. At the same time he pleaded for labor to rally to the Socialist party.

The speaker declared Smith's alliance is shown by his appointment of George B. Van Namee, public service commissioner, as his pre-convention campaign manager.

"Van Namee has a perfect record for doing the right thing by the public utilities body," Thomas declared. "If anything more were necessary to convince progressives of the folly of looking to Hoover, it is to be found in his dependence upon Andrew Mellon and the Republican machine of darkest Pennsylvania."

Thomas declared in switching from his attack on the Democrats to politics in the talkers' home area than on the Illinois man's candidacy.

To a visitor who wanted to know what they thought of the convention situation, some of the workers replied with emphasis:

"Why, just the same, of course, Lowden will be nominated. At least, Hoover will be beaten."

WOMEN MOBILIZE

REPUBLICAN PLANK

Law Enforcement Committee
Opens Kansas City Convention; to Bombard G. O. P.

SEEKS ACTS ASSURING
ABSOLUTE PROHIBITION

Wets, in Defensive Position,
Proceed Slowly; Dr. Butler
Promises Battle.

Kansas City, June 10 (A.P.).—With the wets determined to hold their fire until they glimpse the whites of the enemy's eyes, a militant prohibition army was mobilizing here today to demand from the Republican party an assurance that the prohibition laws would be actively enforced by sympathetic officials.

Fostering plans already worked out by a committee of representatives of the dry organizations, the women's national committee for law enforcement opened a convention which will throw a five-day bombardment upon the Republicans. Almost their first action was the approval of a resolution asking the party convention to put enforcement in the hands of friends of the law and to enact additional laws to assure a drinkless land.

Wets Proceed Slowly.

The smaller group of wets, in a defensive position, was proceeding slowly. Miss Louise Gross, chairman of the Women's Committee for Repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, arrived with the announcement that she would oppose any dry or enforcement plank. She expressed the belief that such problems should be settled by the people at the polls, and declared that for that reason effort would be made to secure a wet plank in the party platform.

Her position was bolstered by Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, a New York delegate, who characterized an enforcement plank as "the bunk," and said he would oppose vigorously any attempt to incorporate in the platform an approval of the eighteenth amendment and the prohibition laws.

Plan Another Meeting in Houston.

Butler said he expected to find the prospective Borah dry plank "a bunch of platitudes that don't mean anything."

The women's convention opened with a declaration by Mrs. Henry W. Presbody, of Beverly, Mass., national chairman of the committee, that "the women of the country want one issue above all others to be the last and only one satisfactorily in the party platform."

"We are prepared to back up our wish with our votes," she said, "and if the politicians who are in the party would add to our list of demands, we would vote on election day it would be for them to give us adequate defense of the United States Constitution for which we are fighting."

She said the committee would hold a similar meeting in Houston during the Democratic convention, at which the feminine drys of that party would assemble. Hundreds of meetings are planned by the women's organizations for the campaign, she added.

Mobilizing for War.

Mrs. John D. Sherman, a past president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, one of the women's organizations allied with the committee, declared:

"We have a right to demand that those who ask our support make straight forward statement of their views and intentions."

"This is a crusade and we have enlisted—not for a battle, but for the war," she declared. "We must not fail to make that demand."

Similar expressions came from other representatives and officials of affiliated organizations, including the Salvation Army, the Women's Christian Temperance Union, the Council of Women for Home Missions, the Federation of Women's Foreign Mission Societies and the Congress of Parents and Teachers.

CRISIS FOR MYSELF,
NO HOOPER, NO
IS SENATOR'S STAND

Kansas Disinclined to Cooperation With Banded Foes of Leading Candidate.

REACHES KANSAS CITY
TO DIRECT OWN FIGHT

Fails to See Gains by Secretary of Commerce; Frowns at Vice Presidency Talk.

Kansas City, June 10 (A.P.).—Soon after Senator Curtis arrived here today it became apparent that he is personally directing maneuvers toward his selection as a compromise candidate by the Republican convention in event of a deadlock.

Although claimed to date by the Lowden-Watson-Goff "allies" antagonistic toward Hoover, the Kansas flatly declined to discuss the coalition against the Secretary of Commerce.

"I am running for President by myself," he said, "and I am running alone."

He brushed himself immediately in conferences with leaders among the cohorts who were in touch with the situation, but the conferees invariably drew the distinction that Curtis was "for himself" instead of "against Hoover."

In a prepared statement which lacked the bitterness against Hoover's candidacy that has marked many declarations by the anti-Hoover forces, Senator Curtis said he did not see "where Mr. Hoover could gain any great gain."

The statement recalled testimony before the Senate campaign funds committee by James W. Good, the Hoover manager, regarding the Mississippi and Texas delegations coming for Hoover.

Vice Presidency Talk Annoys.

"Yet Mr. Hoover's forces claimed a gain by the result of the contest regarding that State," said Curtis, in respect to Mississippi.

Years ago he maintained that "according to their own claims, there were no gains there for Mr. Hoover."

A businesslike but withal light-hearted attitude marked the swarthy Senator Republican leader, who has Indian blood in his veins, as he called one after another of his followers in his quiet, unassuming way.

His smile gave way to an annoyed expression, however, when questioned about mention of him for the Vice Presidency.

Assessing such talk as "wholly unauthorized," the Kansas said he was "a candidate for President and certainly not a candidate for Vice President."

He added: "I am investigating these reports of running me for Vice President. It is against my wish and wholly without authority from me or my friends."

Jolity was the keynote among the Curtis followers outside his room while he was in the city. The central figure was William Allen White, the widely known editor of the Emporia (Kans.) Gazette.

A delegate at large to the convention, he said his man would "knock the slats out of Hoover if he can, but he'll knock them out in a gentlemanly way."

Followers Claim Oklahoma.

Others who passed in and out of the Kansas candidate's sanctum during the day included "Poly" Tinsler, former representative from Kansas, who will be a delegate to the convention, and national committeeman from Kansas and George A. Clark, the home State manager for Curtis. After leaving the Curtis headquarters, Clark said: "Senator Curtis is a compromise candidate."

Asked whether Curtis contemplated leaving the Lowden-Watson-Goff group, Hoover forces, Clark declined to say any further than "he is a candidate for the presidency."

Several members of the Oklahoma delegation visited Curtis, after which the Kansas's followers expressed confidence that most of the votes from the Oklahoma delegation would go to Curtis.

Desirable rooms and pleasant places to stay are listed every morning in Post Classified Ads.

When the Curtis statement had been circulated some speculation was heard in the crowd of hotel lobbies as to just how far he would go against Hoover. No mention was made of the Commerce Secretary by the Kansas aside from his denials that he had made "any great gains."

He expressed hope that "the convention will nominate the man who will make the strongest best chance for the party."

Under all circumstances I am the man.

Warns Against Apologizing.

"The convention," he continued, "can not afford to nominate as the head of the ticket any one for whom the party will be on the defense from the day he is named until the close of the polls on election day. The result of the contests before the national committee does not cause me concern."

The Congress that has just adjourned made a splendid record. On this record and the record for the administration for the last four years our party can win the coming election if the candidate is a man for whom no apologies will be required."

These remarks were applied out as "pointed" by some of the most outspoken against the Hoover candidacy, but no declaration was forthcoming authoritatively as having had the Commerce Secretary in mind when advocating the nomination of a candidate "for whom no apologies will be required."

Watson Special Carries
Pledges Against Hoover

On Board the Watson Special En Route to Kansas City, June 10 (A.P.).—Bearing the signatures of 50,000 men and 100,000 women, the Watson special will not vote in the November election for any presidential candidate who is opposed to the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill or similar legislation.

The Indiana Farm Bureau Federation and a farmer delegation tonight were en route to the Republican national convention at Kansas City on the "Watson Special." The train left Indianapolis at 3 p. m.

The Indiana farm group recently went on record as opposing Secretary Hoover for President. Discussing Hoover's prospects at the national convention, William H. Scott, president of the Indiana Farm Bureau Federation and a member of the group on the train, declared "anybody can beat Hoover in Indiana this fall if he is nominated."

"Hoover can not carry Indiana," he continued. "If Hoover is nominated at Kansas City he will be defeated. Neither he nor Coolidge could carry Indiana."

5,000 See Byrd Plane
At Naval Air Station

Nearly 5,000 persons visited the naval air station yesterday to view Commander Richard Byrd's polar plane, Floyd Bennett, which arrived at the station unharmed Saturday afternoon.

The plane, piloted by Bert Baughman and Harold Irving June, the latter being the pilot who replaces Floyd Bennett, is in Washington for radio tests. Ralph M. Holtz, of San Francisco, radio manufacturer, and Howard Mason, radio engineer, who will accompany Byrd, were passengers in the plane.

Malcolm P. Hanson, Naval Research Laboratory, radio expert of the expedition, assisted in the tests, and it is believed that a suitable type was selected yesterday, although the party declined to talk about their trip. The plane will leave this morning for Miller Field, New York, where the plane and its instruments will be tested. It is a Ford all-metal monoplane, and will be used in the polar flights of Commander Byrd.

Mrs. Longworth Joins
Kansas City Crowds

Kansas City, June 10 (A.P.).—Mrs. Nicholas Longworth arrived today as a passenger on Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Miller's private car from New York, to join the party in the city.

Her brother, Theodore Roosevelt, is a Hoover delegate from New York.

Scattered knots of women gathered in the hotel lobby to catch a glimpse of the former Alice Roosevelt's tall, bustling figure, in smart brown printed silk with close, dark hat. Mrs. Ruth Pratt, an aide-man of New York and a Republican delegate to the 1924 convention, was also in the party.

His Movie.

Westwood, N. J., June 10 (A.P.).—Buses and private motor cars were halted and stores and garages shut down today in a wave of Sunday blue law enforcement which passed over the borough. The movement started when police closed the motion picture theater of Alan Meyer, and took the proprietor and his operator to headquarters, where each was fined $15.

Men who were in the peace, retaliated by swarming in deputized by closed every store, restaurant and garage in the borough and stopped all motor traffic, of which were operating. Meyer claimed, in violation of the State vice and immorality act of 1884.

Mayor Louis Ruckmeyer communicated with Prosecutor A. C. Hart, and the four closed the local movie theater. Meyer was patched up. Some of the buses were delayed as long as an hour and a half.

Governor Continues Whirl-

Changes in Constitution.

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va., June 10.—Prediction that the amendment to the Virginia constitution, including tax segregation and the shorter ballot, will carry by large majorities all over the State in the special election June 18 was made tonight by Gov. Harry F. Byrd as he left for another whirlwind campaign in southwest Virginia.

He spoke at a crowded hotel at Marlinton, in the afternoon at Wytheville, and at night at Pulaski. He is scheduled to make three speeches daily in the southwest until Friday night, when he will return to his office in Richmond for several hours, and then go to Roanoke for a big Saturday night meeting.

The governor was immensely pleased with attendance and enthusiasm at meetings in Winchester Friday night and Harrisonburg Saturday afternoon and Sunday morning.

He said he had "knock the slats out of Hoover if he can, but he'll knock them out in a gentlemanly way."

BUSINESS REPORTS SHOW STEADY KEEL HELD DURING WEEK

Seasonal Influences Cause
Some Irregularities Here and There.

STEEL OUTPUT IS LIKELY TO BREAK ALL RECORDS

Auto Production Heavy; Car
Loadings Lag; Rain Retards
Retail Trade.

New York, June 10 (A.P.).—Business continued to move along on a fairly even keel last week, such irregularities as developed being traceable to seasonal or weather influences. Recent tightening of credit conditions apparently have had little effect upon the commercial demands for funds.

Opening of the Republican national convention this week naturally centers attention on political factors, although the tradition that business is adversely affected by the uncertainties of presidential years appears to be losing ground.

The seasonal decline in the output of the steel industry continues gradual. Barring an unexpectedly sharp decline in the next few weeks, steel output for the first six months of the year will break all records for that period. Pig iron production is small, the daily average in May being the lowest for that month since 1925. Pig iron prices are at the lowest levels since 1915.

Auto Output at High Level.

Production in the automobile industry is being maintained at high levels. May output of members of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce totaled 326,700 cars and trucks, a decline of 3 per cent under April, but 14 per cent above May of last year. This does not include Ford production, which is steadily gaining.

Freight car loads in the week ended May 26 exceeded the million mark for the third consecutive week this year, but were again below the corresponding weeks of 1927 and 1926. The recent tendency appears to be upward, whereas a year ago the summer trend was lower.

Bank clearings are being maintained well above last year, but because of excessive speculation in securities during the past few months they are believed to have lost their barometric value. Commercial failures were numerically greater last week than in any corresponding week of the last five years.

Building Activity Holding Up.

Building activity is reported to be holding up unusually well. The lumber industry has entered a period of seasonal curtailment in output. The textile business is quiet. The oil industry reports a record-breaking consumption of gasoline, although some uneasiness has developed over the recent increase in crude oil production and its possible effect on prices.

Heavy rains retarded retail business in the East and Middle West last week. Chain stores and mail order sales continue to run above the corresponding period of last year. Warmer weather is expected to stimulate the sale of wearing apparel.

Crops were distinctly benefited by the stormy weather. Reports from the Southwest indicate that sufficient moisture is assured to bring the winter wheat crop to maturity, recent estimates placing the yield above 510,000,000 bushels, as against 483,000,000 indicated last month and a harvest of 522,000,000 last year. Spring wheat areas also have been aided by rains.

WEEK'S TREND OF BONDS IS STEADILY DOWNWARD

U. S. Federal Issues Lead
Reaction Under Tightening Fund Rates.

FEW RAILS ARE ACTIVE

New York, June 10 (A.P.).—The

trend of prices in the bond market was decidedly downward during the past week. While there were few sharp recessions, the movement toward lower levels was steady under the influence of higher rates and time money rates, the highest in years, unusually heavy foreign issues, and an atmosphere of hesitancy which reduced the volume of trading.

United States Government bonds especially declined, most of these issues dropping early in the week to new low levels for the year, or longer, but there was a slight improvement after announcement of new Treasury financing. This was the first of two series of short-term bonds totaling $400,000,000.

The activity of the general list was only nominal during the week and almost without features. Among the industrials copper attracted most attention, but their strength was confined usually to early trading and they ended the day almost invariably at lower levels. Dodge Bros. debenture 6s, Liquid Carbonic convertible 6s, Loew's 6s, with warrants, and a few others were active, but price movements were irregular. Most industrials closed the week at considerably lower levels.

A few speculative rails were active in limited advances, but most of the first grade issues felt the pressure of the general market. The foreign list held steady early in the week, but declined toward the close.

The total of new offerings during the week was $223,445,365, as compared with $99,123,000 last week and $253,780,000 for the corresponding week in 1927.

Santa Fe Will Buy Orient Rail Control

Wichita, Kans., June 10 (A.P.).—The

Achison, Topeka, & Santa Fe Railway intends to take over the entire capital stock of the Kansas City, Mexico & Orient Railroad, it was indicated at a meeting of Orient directors here, which was held last night. The Santa Fe already has acquired the 40 per cent interest in the Orient Line, owned by the English capitalists, who, in 1901, first backed Arthur E. Stinson, president of the railroad, in his attempt to build the road. Negotiations now are under way, the directors were informed, for the purchase of the remaining 60 per cent owned by W. T. Kemper, of Kansas City and his associates.

Gen. Alvarez Faces Mexican Trial Today

Laredo, Tex., June 10 (A.P.).—Gen.

Jose Alvarez, former chief of the Mexican presidential staff, accompanied by his son, Jose Alvarez, Jr., 17, and his attorney, Luis Sotelo Regal, has arrived at Nuevo Laredo from Mexico City under heavy guard.

Gen. Alvarez faces trial Monday before the public minister, Judge Luis Galino, at Nuevo Laredo, on charges of conspiring to bring into Mexico large quantities of silk by the use of the president's name.

"I am innocent," Gen. Alvarez said before his attorney warned him not to talk to newspapermen until after the trial starts.

SEEING RUSSIA

E-M-NEWMAN

THIS NEW BOOK by the famous "Traveltalks" lecturer takes the reader all over Russia—from Leningrad to the Crimea, from the Volga Valley to the mountain Republics of the Caucasus, visiting the more important cities, comparing the old with the new, and chatting upon the human-interest side as he goes along.

Three Hundred Uncensored Photographs

Mr. Newman is the only traveler who has been allowed to photograph whatever he pleased and bring his pictures out of the country absolutely uncensored. Among these striking photographs are: The bedroom of the late Czarina, also her living-room, showing it just as she left it; the little Czarina who was shot to death with his parents; a busy market square in Moscow, where every turnip and cabbage is taxed and where the bootlegging of a chicken or a potato is a crime; how the wild boys of Moscow go to bed; Jewish colonies in the Ukraine now have their flocks and herds as in Bible times; abdication rooms in the palace at Turin; the death of the Czar; the last papers before the journey that ended in death for himself and family; women of the former nobility selling home-made hats to workers' wives; inscription placed near the shrine of the Iberian Virgin reading "Religion—Opium of the People"; the first and last photographs taken of the interior of the Kremlin since the beginning of the Soviet regime; many photographs taken during a journey down the River Volga to the Caspian Sea; scenes in the Rostovsk Jewish Colony; etc.

BELLEVUE MANSION BECOMES COLONIAL DAMES' HOME HERE

Historic Georgetown Residence Purchased by Society for About $180,000.

FIRST HEADQUARTERS ORGANIZATION HAS HAD

Structure Was Erected in 1760 by George Beall; Notables Have Been Tenants.

Purchase of Bellevue, historic old Georgetown mansion, as a headquarters building for the National Society of the Colonial Dames of America, was announced here last night by officials of the organization, who plan to take over title to the property this fall. The consideration approximated $180,000, it was stated.

Decision to purchase a home was reached at the last meeting of the council of the society, and $50,000 was pledged for its purchase. It was determined to raise the remainder of the necessary funds through State organizations, and Mrs. Rose Gouverneur Hoe was named chairman of the local committee.

Never Had Own Building.

Although the national society has maintained headquarters here for years, it has never had a building of its own, and its president, Mrs. James A. Andrews, makes her home in Connecticut.

Bellevue, now owned by Mrs. Cresson Newbold, dates back to 1760. The house is of brick, and stands on a terrace overlooking Q street, within two blocks of Rock Creek Bridge. It has a central, two-story building, and a long, low wing at either end. Two bays in the dining and drawing rooms open through French windows on a rear garden, and at the foot of the terrace there is a retaining wall of Colonial design.

Erected in 1763.

Records show that the house was built by George Beall, on part of a tract of land patented by his father, Ninian, in 1703. Gabriel Duval, Comptroller of the Currency in 1800, and appointed President Madison to the Supreme Court bench afterward, occupied the house, later selling it to Joseph Nourse, the first Register of the United States Treasury.

Among others who lived there were Charles Carroll, who gave it the name of "Bellevue," Commodore John Rogers, the naval hero, and Samuel Whitall, a Quaker of Philadelphia.

Officials of the society plan to furnish the house with Colonial furniture, and maintain it as a museum of the Colonial history of America.

WILD WEST PARADE IN CAPITAL TODAY

Cowboys, Cowgirls, Indians, Bronchos and Elephants in Ranch Circus.

Cowboys and cowgirls, Indians and Cosacs, cavaliers and vaqueros, elephants and camels, bronchos and buffalo—in fact, all of the hundreds of picturesque people and animals that make up the traveling host of the 101 Ranch Wild West, swarmed onto the circus grounds at Camp Meigs yesterday noon, and hundreds of Washingtonians were there to greet them. By mid-afternoon several thousand people were enjoying the varied activities of the colorful folk from the cattle country and foreign climes. The big Oklahoma organization, exhibiting here today and tomorrow, will begin its performance with a street parade.

The long procession will leave the grounds at 10 a. m. today and proceed from Fifth and Florida avenue northeast to New York avenue, to L street, to Tenth street, to K street, to Washington Circle, around the circle and east on Pennsylvania avenue to Second street northwest, to E street, to Fifth street northeast, to Florida avenue and to the lot. It is the last big circus parade remaining in America.

The 101 Ranch performances, starting at 2 and 8 p. m. today and Tuesday, open with a new spectacle, "Julius Caesar," in which nearly 1,000 people and animals participate.

AFRICAN ART WORKS ON EXHIBITION HERE

Harlem Museum May Be Seen in Library of Howard University.

An exhibit of African sculpture and handicraft, the traveling collection of the recently founded Harlem Museum of African Art, is being held at Howard University following its commencement week exhibition. The foundation grew out of the exhibition in New York a year ago of the Blonds collection of art objects from the Belgian Congo, most of the objects in the collection being from that region.

Work of the tribes of this district represent highly artistic products of primitive art from the viewpoints of conception and technical execution. The exhibition includes metal working, wood carving, weaving, pottery and decoration. It has been exhibited previously at the Chicago Art Institute, the rooms of the New York Art Circle, the Rochester Memorial Art Gallery, and other art centers.

The object of bringing the collection to Howard University was to arouse in the younger generation an intelligent interest in and respect for the African background. The exhibit and the New York Museum project have grown out of several years' work by Alain Leroy Locke. It may be seen on the second floor of the Carnegie Library building.

COMPRESSOR BLAST DAMAGES GAS PLANT

An air compressor apparatus exploded shortly after 10 o'clock yesterday morning at the Dome Oil Co. gasoline filling station, Sixteenth and Taylor streets northwest, wrecking the rear portion of the building and demolishing the floor of the entire structure. A few of the gasoline filling tanks, according to police, were rendered useless.

According to Paul J. Crummett, general manager of the company, the explosion was caused by faulty working of the air apparatus. He said that the equipment, used for filling tires, worked automatically and the emergency valve apparently failed to function.

Two employees of the station were attending the wants of patrons outside the building when the explosion occurred. They were Robert Audas and John H. Beyer. Mr. Crummett declared that the damage would run over $100.

BOOSTERS ARRIVE AT VIRGINIA BEACH AFTER RIVER TRIP

High Winds and Squalls Mark Cruise of Party Down Chesapeake Bay.

MEMBERS ARE SADDENED BY DEATH OF R. L. TAYLOR

Stop at Old Point Comfort Provides Time for Fishing and Round of Golf.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Norfolk, Va., June 10 (On Board Steamship Southland).—On the third day of their annual cruise, which carries the slogan of "Boost and Buy in Washington," the 225 members and guests of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association are this afternoon at Virginia Beach, with headquarters at the Cavalier Hotel. Here they are indulging in bathing, swimming and other sports.

The Steamship Southland docked at Old Point Comfort at 7:30 o'clock this morning and the Boosters attended church services, and afterward a majority of the party donned their knickerbockers and went the rounds of the links at the Hampton Golf Club. While generally good weather has prevailed throughout the trip, the voyage down Chesapeake Bay last night was marked by high winds and rain squalls, and members of the party exhibited marked concern this morning by the storm which hit the southeast part of Washington Saturday night, with property damage of approximately $300,000.

Many Go Fishing.

During the 4½-hour stop at Old Point Comfort, in addition to those who played golf, many of the boosters went fishing. The party was met by Stephen, president of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, took a group for an inspection of Langley Field, just outside of Hampton, Va. The boosters were shocked to learn of the sudden death last night of Robert L. Taylor, who enjoyed a large acquaintance among the members of the organization. His death was announced this morning by Maj. Gen. Stephan and expressions of regret were voiced by his many friends.

On the homeward trip tonight valuable prizes will be awarded to members. These include everything from two tons of coal to a marble wave for the wife of some booster.

Program of Entertainment.

Entertainment was furnished the boosters by Jack Rosenberg of the Hecht Co., who rendered several vocal solos, and Dick Mansfield, headquarters detective, several piano numbers.

Ross P. Andrews, past president of the organization, in a brief address, asserted that one of the greatest objects of the trip is that every merchant should boost the other man's business. Andrews impressed upon his audience that the good will is shown to his fellow man his business will not succeed.

Those who are responsible for the success of the party include Charles H. Frame, general chairman; Bert Olmstead, commissary; Frank P. A. Valear, entertainment; Claude W. Owen, itinerant; J. Sandman, publicity; A. A. Auth refreshments; Isaac Gaus, souvenirs, and Lewis A. Payne, tickets.

NAVAL HOSPITAL PATIENT DIVES FROM BED TO DIE

Skull of H. V. Anderson Fractured as He Falls to Ground From Window.

BROTHER WAS NEAR HIM

Diving headlong from a second floor window of the Naval Hospital, yesterday morning, Harold V. Anderson, 31 years old, a patient, was fatally injured. His body was found 15 minutes after the leap and he was pronounced dead by Lieut. Comdr. T. E. Cox, a physician at the hospital.

District Coroner J. Ramsay Nevitt issued a certificate of suicide. The police investigation was carried on by Patrolman J. J. Ramsey, of the Third Precinct. Anderson was formerly a patient and fireman at Walter Reed Hospital and was transferred to the Naval Hospital a few days ago.

According to police, Anderson was in bed a few moments before he dived to his death. He was conversing with his brother, John Anderson, of Providence, R. I., and W. O. Davis, who are also patients at the Naval Hospital.

Without warning, police say, Harold Anderson arose from his bed, ran to the window and dived headlong. His brother and Davis noticed hospital authorities and Lieut. Comdr. Cox rushed outside the building. The body was brought to the operating room, where life was pronounced extinct from a broken skull. Despondency over illness was attributed as the cause for Anderson's act.

Coroner Nevitt deferred action in the case of John Stieckelmyer, 71 years old, of Scotland, Md., who died yesterday afternoon in Georgetown University Hospital as the result of self-administered poison, taken on Saturday.

According to Coroner Nevitt, the man apparently took the poison by mistake at his home in Scotland. His physician, Dr. S. Logan Owens, 2124 Leroy place northwest, will conduct an investigation into the death and report to Dr. Nevitt today, when a certificate of death will be issued.

THE PIVOTAL STATE.

The Greensboro Record makes the wise observation that the Democratic party would make a fatal mistake if it should commit itself to the McNary-Haugen bill in an effort to capitalize the dissatisfaction of Republican voters in the farm States. Assuming that the Kansas City convention will not be entirely successful in reconciling East and West on the farm relief issue, it is evident that the Democratic party should profit by the embarrassment of its rival. "But," says the Greensboro Record, "the Democratic party should not seek to gain votes by making promises that either are impossible of fulfillment or may be kept only by embarking upon a venture which is unsound in principle and entirely foreign to Democratic doctrine."

In another article the alert spokesman of North Carolina Democracy asks, "If the Democratic party nominates Gov. Al Smith at Houston and the Republicans nominate Herbert Hoover at Kansas City, who will be the respective nominees for Vice President?"

Is there not to be found in the answer to this query a way to capitalize the farm issue? The State in the farm belt that contributes the greatest number of electoral votes is Illinois. It is a pivotal State, which Gov. Smith might be able to carry with the help of an Illinois running mate who is in sympathy with the farm element. The strength of Lewis G. Stevenson, of Illinois, is based upon this situation, as well as upon his other points of availability. The son of the late Vice President Stevenson is a farmer, a former secretary of state of Illinois, and a Presbyterian. He is well known in Kentucky, Indiana and Iowa as well as in Illinois, both on his father's account and his own. The selection of Stevenson as a running mate for Gov. Smith would be in itself evidence of the sympathetic attitude of the Democratic party toward the farm relief problem, and would be more convincing than a mere platform declaration.

Events at Kansas City may remove some of the embarrassment of the Republican party in farm relief matters, but they will not alter the fact that Illinois is the best fighting ground of the Democratic party. It is not to be presumed that Democratic leaders will choose a vice presidential candidate from the South, which is already assuredly Democratic, even if the popular vote should be reduced, when they can gain a decided advantage in a great pivotal State by making one of its sons a running mate of Al Smith. Illinois' electoral vote may determine the election.

RED TAPE AND PANTS.

No satirist every devised a situation better calculated to make a mockery of governmental red tape than the one that was remedied last week when President Coolidge signed a bill clearing the reputation of Larr Cardwell, former Annapolis student, who was dismissed from the Naval Academy two years ago for having donned a classmate's "pants" in order to make himself presentable for inspection. The act of Congress reinstates Cardwell in the Naval Academy.

The facts in the case as they were presented in Congress indicated nothing so much as an inability to square regulations with human nature. No man who ever attended boarding school or college can say that at some time he has not worn borrowed raiment, obtained more often by unwritten law than by first getting permission from the owner. Cardwell found that with but a minute or two to spare in which to change his clothes he had no trousers sufficiently presentable to pass inspection. He donned a pair belonging to a fellow student. The loss was reported before Cardwell could return them. He stood charged with theft.

A little less official rigidity might have saved the situation right there. Cardwell had no intention of appropriating something that did not belong to him. The worst that should have been laid against him was that he had exacted a forced loan. He was tried, found guilty, and dismissed. Two years have been consumed in correcting this mistake. A little common sense and a little less red tape would have spared Cardwell the humiliation to which he was subjected, and the process of making a good naval officer would not have been impeded.

JOHNNY DOOLEY.

The death of Johnny Dooley will be mourned by the theater-going world. For years, first in vaudeville and later in revues, he has made the tired business man lose his worries in laughter. Johnny Dooley was only 38. He should have had years of laugh-provoking work ahead of him.

Like many other theatrical stars, Johnny Dooley was born abroad. His father was a clown who later became a seafarer, bringing his four children to America to be educated. Each of the four became actors, and finally the "Four Dooleys" became vaudeville favorites. Later the team was split up, William and Gordon Dooley putting on an act of their own, while Johnny and his sister, Ray, formed a partnership that raised each to stardom. Finally Ray and Johnny joined different shows.

Johnny Dooley's most valuable possessions were his legs, not because he could make them behave to a tinkling tune as well if not better than most professional dancers, but because he could make them fold up and collapse beneath him. Other actors, Leon Errol for example, have legs that make the public snicker, but Johnny Dooley's legs were unlike any that ever had been seen before or probably ever will be seen again. With Johnny Dooley's death the stage loses a great comedian.

THE MERGER SURVEY.

The Senate District committee's traction merger survey probably will get under way within the next two weeks. Although the entire subcommittee has not yet given approval to the selection, it seems likely that this important task will be entrusted to Dr. Milo R. Maltbie, former New York public service commissioner and expert in public utility matters. Dr. Maltbie is said to be ready to come to Washington as soon as his appointment is ratified.

The traction merger problem should be tackled early in the coming session. For years there has been general agreement that public transportation in Washington could be measurably improved, with one company operating a unified system. Furthermore it has been believed that economies resulting from unified operation would serve to make possible lower fares and enlarged facilities. It may well be that the pending agreement is not thoroughly satisfactory. Any merger must of necessity be built upon compromise, and those interested therein must expect to make sacrifices for the sake of ultimate mutual benefit. The merger agreement worked out by the companies appeared to deal fairly with the public. It failed to gain Congressional approval, however, so there still remains ample time in which to study it.

The Senate has done well to choose an expert to delve deeply into the project. While it does not follow that his report will become the policy of the Senate committee, it is reasonable to expect that the report will throw additional light upon the subject.

CROOKED DAMAGE SUITS.

Prolonged investigation of ambulance chasing activities on the part of New York lawyers has been concluded in Manhattan and Queens. Prosecution of a number of attorneys has been ordered in both jurisdictions. Indictments are being sought in some instances for statutory offenses. In others the final action may be disbarment of the lawyers in question. Months have been consumed in the investigation of the practices, against which complaint had been registered for years.

It developed during the inquiry that many firms of attorneys specialized in the practice of damage suits on a contingent basis, and in order to obtain their share of the business employed solicitors. These solicitors were stationed at police stations, hospitals and other avenues of information to obtain the early details of accidents. It was their duty to obtain the signature of an accident victim to a contract, which they then either turned over to the lawyers by whom they were employed, or else sold to the highest bidder. The runners did not limit themselves to such tasks. Testimony was introduced to show that in some cases injuries were magnified, false witnesses were obtained, and perjured testimony was offered.

The growth of the practices under investigation has been closely linked with the increased use of automobiles. The thousands of accidents occurring each year in city traffic increased the possibility for suits brought under the negligence law. Insurance companies and private individuals were spending millions to protect their rights, and as much more was being paid in settlement of suits, many of which were not justified.

It is the belief of the New York authorities that the investigation will correct many of the evils. It ought certainly to serve as a deterrent among those who have been prone to misuse the law.

STATION WEBB.

Now and then the Federal Radio Commission receives a pleasant surprise. Usually its mail contains a sheaf of criticism, relieved occasionally by a threat from a broadcaster whose license is about to be revoked, that he intends to summon legal aid to fight "confiscation of property." The receipt of a letter from operators of Station WEBB, voluntarily relinquishing its license, therefore, was greeted with rejoicing, especially since the author of the letter made the sensible suggestion that other station operators might follow his example with profit.

When WEBB was established, the president of New York's Third Avenue Railway System, its owner, recited, "the public were tuning in on all stations and we had ample evidence that WEBB was getting its share of the attention of listeners. With the present situation, when the principal stations have been highly commercialized and the best and most expensive talent secured for their advertising programs, and when extensive hook-ups of such stations are being made, we are satisfied that the great mass of listeners confine their attention to these elaborately programmed stations and that other stations to a large extent simply encumber the air and interfere with the reception from more prominent stations, without serving any good public purpose."

Here is a sensible and reasonable analysis of the present broadcasting situation, unusual in that it comes from a station owner whose license to operate was not included in the 162 throughout the country named by the commission to be considered for discontinuance. If other stations similarly situated could be brought to realize that they do not serve public interest, necessity or convenience, the task of the radio commission would be eased considerably. The tendency among broadcasters, however, is to struggle even against reason and logic to survive; so the commission is forced to its duty of killing off the unfit.

THE BASEBALL SEASON.

The best date upon which to schedule opening games of the major baseball leagues has become a matter of wide debate in professional baseball circles. This year the season began on April 11. Cold weather and rain, however, combined to force postponement after postponement, with the result that at the present time an inordinate number of double-headers lie ahead of all teams in both leagues. The National League held its summer session several days ago and the matter came up for discussion. Several team representatives held out for May 1 as the opening date. It was agreed finally that early spring weather was only a gamble, and it was determined that next year the season should be opened on April 16.

This decision, since a league season consists of 164 games, will serve to throw the world series back a corresponding number of days in the fall. Here is where the rub comes in. Bad weather frequently has broken during the world series, and this is more of a calamity to organized baseball than bad weather during the early spring season. Five days, it may be argued, should make little difference. Experience, however, has indicated that five days may make the greatest difference.

One alternative lies in a shortened schedule. If the season were opened on May 1, or thereabout, and the last league games were played no later than September 20, there should be ample time for a seven-game world series before cold and blustery fall weather sets in. Should such a schedule be decided upon, however, the box office, in the opinion of officials, would suffer. This opinion being generally held, it is probable that there will be no tampering with the present length of the season. After all, baseball, like any other big business, dares do nothing that would affect adversely its income.

ENFORCEABLE ARBITRATION.

The American Bar Association will have no more important matter to consider when it meets next month than the report of its committee on commerce, recommending legislation to make arbitration of industrial controversies in the field of interstate commerce binding in law. It is not proposed to make arbitration compulsory. Workers and employers will be left free to enter any form of trade or industrial organization they desire, but it is proposed that where arbitration is included as a means of settling disputes the results achieved through arbitration shall be valid contracts. Arbitration is not now binding, except in three States. Only too often the time and effort given to such attempts at adjustment are wasted when the principals refuse to accept the decision.

The bill proposed by the bar association committee on commerce falls into two sections. The first creates a Federal industrial council, composed of representatives of industry, commerce, labor, agriculture, and authorizes it to "consider such conditions affecting industry as in their opinion causes strikes, lockouts or controversy between management and labor or those furnishing capital and labor." The commission would make public its findings and recommendations, but would have no authority to make any decisions or awards.

The other part of the bill makes valid and enforceable "any agreement for arbitration, mediation or conciliation made between an employer and an organization of employees, or between an organization of employers and an organization of employees, provided the severance of the relations between them would result in burden upon or restraint, obstruction or curtailment of interstate or foreign commerce or seriously interrupt the free flow thereof."

Arbitration without some such provisions as have been recommended by the committee to the American Bar Association can never be fully effective. It is a means of settlement to which disputants resort with the intention of disregarding the findings in the event they are regarded as unfavorable. If arbitration is to be a part of the Nation's industrial machinery, there should be some guarantee that it be made effective. The proposals here discussed would make of arbitration a useful rather than merely a usable element in labor controversies.

ART AND THE MOVIES.

The "Society of Arts and Sciences," whatever that is, has set out on the rather ambitious program of determining "from the brains of the world" whether or not the movies are to be formally admitted to the status of a fine art. Ten thousand ballots are to be mailed to poets, artists, philosophers, musicians, novelists and scientists in the United States, Spain, Germany, England and France, upon which they are asked to vote "yes" or "no" upon the single question as to whether or not the movies should be classed as the eighth art.

If there is to be an eighth art the movies are entitled to that distinction. Certainly they constitute a totally new type of expression. To a certain extent they carry on the ancient tradition of pantomime, but they have elevated it, placed it in another medium, and beautified it until a new art has been developed.

The movies of recent years are quite dissimilar to those of the incunabula period. There still are released pictures horrible from the artistic standpoint. Each year, however, sees better movies in greater number, until of late the best releases should satisfy the most artistically critical. In every branch of movie making this improvement may be noted. Acting has developed along individual lines. Costuming and technical direction are traveling the road to artistic perfection. Photography, in certain instances, can be described as superb. The movies do not stand still. Better pictures from every point of view are being produced all the time.

The movies' claim to an artistic position is justified by the pictures themselves.

Last week, with 112,000 men employed, Henry Ford established a new peak employment mark. This week, he announced, there are 115,000 men on the pay roll of the Detroit plants. Those who a year ago were predicting that Henry Ford had lost for all time his position of dominance of the automotive field are now due to sing another song.

The Department of Labor reports that between 1921 and 1927 the demand for dwelling places in apartment houses has doubled. In a selected group of large cities, only 25 per cent of the families in new structures last year were cared for in single family houses, whereas more than 60 per cent were cared for in apartment structures. The American citizen is becoming a cave dweller.

The liar's punishment is that he thinks everybody else is lying and never feels secure about anything.

Last year he put the Black Hills on the map by his famous renunciation.

PRESS COMMENT.

Bad Politics.
Atchison Globe: Iowa, a farm State, can't be so hard up. It nominated a man for governor who is favoring a $100,000,000 road bond issue.

St. Louis Post Dispatch: The difference between a Republican and a Democrat seems to be that a Republican has to have a reason for being opposed to somebody.

Boston Transcript: President Coolidge will have a Wisconsin fishing license in the shape of a gold button. That is interesting, but what the country really wants to know is whether he will bait his hook with a worm or use a fly.

That's What It Needs.
Indianapolis News: It will take some pretty skillful work at both conventions to shape a farm plank that will fit in without any obvious cracks and be smooth enough so that nobody will be hurt by any splinters, but then skilled workmen were never lacking at national conventions.

Advice to Farmers.
Topeka Capital: President Coolidge and Secretaries Hoover and Jardine are said to be busy working out the precise phrasing of the Kansas City plank on agriculture. And it is going to be some plank if it reconciles both Congress and administration. However, while the farmers may not know enough to know, as they have been advised by bankers, railroad men, manufacturers, shipping persons and others, that you can't get anything by legislating, they know enough anyhow not to expect to get much from a platform plank.

Pennsylvania Aviation.
Philadelphia Ledger: Aviation regulations recently adopted by the State Aeronautics Commission follow closely the rulings established by the Department of Commerce. Airplanes are required to fly at safe altitudes, acrobatics over congested areas are prohibited, explosives and other dangerous loads are forbidden, except under special permits; identification marks are demanded. Similarly rigid rules are applied to the fliers themselves. Pilots are divided into four classes, according to experience and training. These include transport pilots, limited commercial pilots, industrial pilots and private pilots. Student fliers must pass physical and other examinations before they receive their licenses. A third feature of the regulations provides for airport ratings. The ratings, when en-

What Does It Profit a Man to Know That Six Times Six Is Forty?

By ROBERT QUILLEN

A VERY small boy who had enjoyed his first day in school stood in front of my house and displayed his learning to awe a less fortunate companion.

"I can spell 'dow,'" said he; "r-m-o-b-s-y."

There was a ring of triumphant superiority in his voice. His smug complacency was wholly sincere. His small person radiated scorn and pity for the uneducated.

Amusing little fellow! And yet how like his elders. He was educated; he was full of knowledge; the only fault in his spelling was the fact that it was wrong.

Which is more to be pitied; the man who never has heard of Africa, or the man who knows all about it, but thinks it is a river in Arkansas?

A few days ago one of the great news agencies sent out from Washington a story in which Lindbergh's plane was described as the one that "blazed the first aerial trail across the Atlantic."

Other planes and lighter-than-air ships crossed from continent to continent before Lindbergh's name was known, but the world has forgotten them. Another fragment of untrue history has been added to the world's vast store. The educated know another fact that isn't a fact.

Ask some stranger who discovered America and he will pity your ignorance. "Columbus," he will say. Yet Columbus never saw America. He discovered South America and Central America, but he didn't make the discovery on which his fame rests.

Robert Fulton didn't make the first steamboat. Europeans didn't invent printing. Witches were not burned in America. The Wrights did not make the first machine capable of flight. The men who engineered the Revolution of the Colonies did not believe in equality. The United States is not the richest nation, per capita. Time is not measured from the birthday of Christ. A tree's limbs do not move upward as it grows. You can not tell a rattlesnake's age by its rattles. A wound in the heart need not be fatal. America was not the first land to give women a vote. The diamond is not the most costly stone. The Bible does not say God tempests the wind to the shorn lamb. The moon is not made of cheese.

It is too easy to get facts twisted—so hard to get them straight! So much of our boasted education consists in learning things that aren't true.

The modern kitchenette has every built-in necessity except a cabinet for indigestion tablets.

Well, if Washington couldn't tell a lie, he doubtless maintained a bitter silence when his neighbors began to talk about trout.

If babies weren't going out of fashion, it would be only a matter of time until every home would have a built-in spanker.

forced after July 1, will apply to air-traffic laws within Pennsylvania planes and pilots within Pennsylvania not untouched by Federal regulations. Their rigid enforcement should accomplish much toward assuring safety and efficiency in aviation.

Retwist and Between.
Akron Beacon-Journal: The Southern Democrat's hard job isn't that of deciding between his prejudices and his principles, but deciding which is which.

Wets Vote Dry.
Philadelphia Inquirer: It is possible, too, that some of our air-talking Congressmen take an occasional nip to get up their courage to vote dry.

Then the Johnsons.
New Orleans Times Picayune: Texas seems to think that since the Smith family is going so strong politically, there is no reason why the Jones family should not have at least a look-in. Browns next!

Regulars Ahead in Wisconsin.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Mighty Uncertain.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: From the talk that is going around in the papers as to the probability of there being a split both at Kansas City and at Houston, the two major parties dividing into factions, one might well think the country is to witness another 1896 campaign. That year we had an abundance of tickets to choose from. We could make our choice between the regular Republican, regular Democrat, free silver Republicans, gold Democrats, narrow-gauge prohibitionists, broad-gauge prohibitionists, Populists and Socialists. It was a rare old campaign, and the pickings were abundant. In one respect it was a repetition of Democratic blundering in 1860. Then the Democrats divided, letting the Republicans win. Had the Democrats been united in 1896 they would have won out. If the dries and wets split at Houston, and the farm relief divides the Republicans at Kansas City, who can guess what the result will be?

Perils of a Walker.
To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to endorse most heartily the sentiments of Charles W. Stark, W. D. B. and R. J. Knox. Not only do the police not pay any attention to the pedestrian, but I have in mind one particular policeman, who, whenever I try to cross the street in the direction in which traffic is moving, invariably changes the signal before I can cross the second car track; and should I attempt to cross the intersecting street with traffic going in that direction he does the same thing. If he does not soon "cut it out" I am going to report him personally to the Police Department. However, I doubt if that will do any good.

Several times, by the merest chance (or perhaps, shall I say, the agility of which Mr. Stark speaks), I was able to escape being run down by street cars and vehicles. The poor pedestrian has no chance whatever at crossings and corners, and if he tries to cross the street in the middle of the block where he can avoid the traffic better, he is called a "jay-walker," a boob, and who knows what not.

THE PRICE OF HAIR.
It is rather surprising, says the Manchester Guardian, that in this century year of Schubert's death a lock of the great musician's hair should have been offered at auction in Vienna with a reserve price of only $45—and failed to attract a single bid. But of all personal relics of the great, hair has always shown the most remarkable fluctuation in prices—one lock of Napoleon's, for instance, having sold for only $15 a few years ago, while another, no larger or more authentic, fetched $1,250.

The vagaries of the market may be gauged from the fact that a wisp of Nelson's hair found a recent purchaser at $1,575, while a similar relic of Wellington realized only $5. One of Byron's curls sold last long since for $75, and a lock of Goldsmith's brought $30—which would have been a godsend to the owner in his lifetime—but clippings of Sir Walter Scott's fine thatch have never risen above $20 in market value.

Perhaps there is some connection between baldness and bargain prices—after all, musicians, who usually have a lot of hair, may spoil their own market by the very profusion of their own supply. On the other hand, an authentic clipping from the sparse remaining fringe of a Julius Caesar's pate would have an almost fabulous value.

THOUGHT-CONTROL
IN EVERYDAY LIFE

By James Alexander

Edward W. Bok, Famous Author and Editor, says of it:

"A book such as 'Thought-Control in Everyday Life' has in it the qualities that would make thousands more intelligent about themselves, happier, more cheerful, and more successful. It is a veritable path to 'know thyself,' and the path in this case is very easy to tread; arguments are easily understood; methods are clearly expressed; we see ourselves in a clear looking-glass. As a so-called 'self helpful book' I know not its equal for simplicity and easy understanding."

A PREEMPTING bid is designed to shut out other bids. It may be an initial declaration, or made after a bid by partner and a pass by second hand; it even may be attempted after an adverse bid, but then it is not nearly as apt to be effective. At this time we shall consider only the preemptive bid when made as an original declaration.

In the vast majority of hands, the best policy for the initial bidder, who is strong enough to bid, is to make an informative one-bid, picturing his hand as accurately as may be to his partner, and giving partner the opportunity to describe his holding without bidding too high (An initial bid of 3 or more is notice to the partner that no bid in any other declaration is desired). But there are exceptional hands in which some particular suit so unusually long and strong that the holder does not need information from partner. With such a hand, the original bidder would feel compelled to return to his suit no matter what the partner might do; therefore the partner's bid can not be of benefit to him. In such cases a bid by the advertiser may be as harmful as the partner's bid is useless; both advertisers may be moderately strong in the same suit and if one of them shows his strength, the other may be able to advance the declaration to an uncomfortably high point, when neither of them would feel justified in making a high bid on his own account. When a preemptive bid accomplishes its purpose and obtains the contract by eliminating all other bidding, game should result if the partner of the preemptor furnishes moderate assistance. When there is some unusual and unfortunate distribution of the adverse cards, or when the partner does not furnish any help, the preemptive bid may be defeated; but that defeat probably will be inexpensive and really a victory for the bidder because it will be less of a loss than would have resulted from allowing the opponents to show each other their strength and consequently go game with a declaration of their own selection.

To sum up: The initial one-bid is designed primarily to give information and may or may not portray the full strength of the bidder's hand; it invites a bid from partner and opponents alike. The preemptive bid of their own selection, "keep off" and hopes to cause opponents to do likewise.

This subject will be continued, with illustrations, next Monday.

WIVES OF TOMORROW

By FRANCES McDONALD

So Blue!

DEAR MISS McDONALD: I am a young girl of 19 years and am considered very cute and attractive. I have plenty of boy friends, and could be out every night in the week, but I can't do it for the very reason that they bore me to death, except one.

Oh, if there is anybody in love, it is me. I think that I have met my Waterloo. He is just my ideal. Comes up to every point that I idolized in a man since I was a child. But the trouble is this: I have been going with him for the past six months. He asks me out twice a week, but doesn't seem to care what I do on other nights. I have received eight proposals from other boys, but just couldn't see my way because I didn't care for them. Now that I have met the boy I love, when I should be getting the attention of a sweetheart, I am getting just the opposite. He treats me very different and cool and doesn't seem to care what I do when I am not with him. Still he tells me that I am his girl and he thinks a lot of me. I would like to marry him tonight if he asked me. I can't keep him off my mind—he keeps appearing day and night. My telephone rings at home, I rush to answer and it is the boys trying to make dates with me. I say not, because I care for him too much.

Please help me in my hour of despair and give me some consolation in the matter.

Thanking you from the bottom of my heart for the advice that you may send forth, I am, SO BLUE.

When the time that phone rings, date whoever or whatever is at the other end.

You say you can't. Then you can't ever win anything—even a man.

Here is the trouble: A woman seems able to maintain that perfect combination of friendly interest and utter indifference which spells complete fascination until she needs it. Then the combination is lost. The man she wants to fascinate is on the scene, and she ceases to be able to fascinate. All the others are still crowding for dates, and she can still say, "No," to them and keep them crowding!

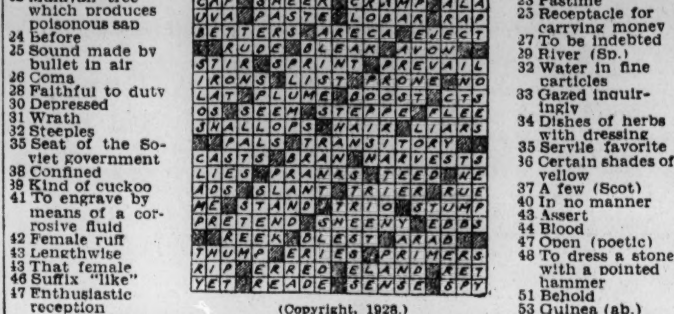

But he! The God-given, heaven-sent, only-one-in-five-billion, he saunters in and out of the picture coolly composed, handing out a date, and a thrill and a nonchalant air reveal!

Get out the formula, girl! Make it work on him as it has on many a bet-mann. Have dates and plenty of them. Let the boys sleep on last night when he dispenses the boon of his presence this evening. Ask him if Friday will be all right instead of Tuesday. Eve was the only woman who could be forgiven for never having another date. And even she had some dates. This is 1928. Stop sighing and act.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

TRAIN THE EPILEPTIC TO UNDERSTAND.

AFTER she gets over her spell she pitches in, and, gee, how she eats! She is a heavy eater all the time, but after a spell she certainly does stow away the food.

The speaker was a man whose sister had had epilepsy for many years. It was of the eating habits of this sister that he was speaking. It is a matter of common knowledge that epileptics are heavy eaters. Many people have noted the tendency of epileptics to gorge themselves with food as soon as the mental confusion following an attack has cleared. This fact should point the way to one principle of proper care.

"My daughter is soon to be married to a gormandizer. If they can be trained to understand they will have fewer spells and lighter ones. A period of hunger, begun about the time an attack is due, may prevent it from coming. As a part of the same theme epileptics who maintain regular bowel habits and who never permit themselves to become constipated have fewer and lighter attacks than those who neglect themselves.

Perhaps one reason why epileptics who engage in farming and other forms of out of doors manual labor have comparatively few attacks is because hard physical labor lessens the harm which results from overeating. Whenever an institution for epileptics permits the inmates to sit around idle and grow fat and lazy it can be certain it is not benefiting those who make use of it. On the other hand, those institutions that have regular hours for improving their patients, have the courage to understand and persuade or compel them to work, or at least to exercise strenuously, do their patients good.

Of course, the institutions that give up-to-date care have a chosen group of patients on a high fat—102 starch diet. Others not suited to such a diet are kept on low diets.

HEELS ON MEN'S SHOES.

H. H. writes: I isn't it true that heels on men's shoes are as definitely harmful as the very high heels on women's? Aside from the shortening of the Achilles tendon, unpleasantly noticeable when in swimming, etc., isn't it possible that the common foot complaints are partially due to the position caused by wearing high heels?

I use a solution of alcohol in the solvent used for thinning lacquers to dress small wounds on the skin. I could almost swear that healing occurs with almost phenomenal rapidity following the use of this dressing. I imagine the solution has strong antiseptic properties. Do you happen to know anything definite about this?

REPLY.

1. What harms the goose also harms the gander.
2. Nature can handle a few bacteria. There may be slight germicidal powders in the dressing material you use. When your method works healing is prompt and perfect. It is dangerous occasionally.

Tetanus germs or other germs that are most harmful when sealed are sometimes on the skin under the airtight dressing.

The skirt is pleated. For this I selected a soft woolen material, a mixture of browns and beiges. I wear a small, dark brown belted skirt, hat trimmed with a grosgrain ribbon in the same color. I am being very sensible and wearing a brown calfskin shoe with a solid leather heel.

The center sketch is too charming! It is of a very heavy crepe de chine in dark green. I know that navy blue and brown and beige are the colors that are being featured mostly at present, and I have many of my dresses in those popular shades, but green is so becoming to me and I always try to piece walking costume. The blouse with the belt gives it a coat appearance.

soft and drapes about the throat and ties on the left shoulder. The skirt is made with two tiers which point up to the waistline. With this I wear a dark brown belted skirt which turns up all the way around. The sketch on the right is a fascinating gown. It has a little pleated cape which is adjustable. The skirt has a pleated flounce which extends to the hip-line at the left side and there, is joined to a pleated cascade at the front. This gown I shall wear very much for luncheons and teas. It is in a lovely navy blue crepe de chine. I wear with it the most adorable small hat with a veil. Love, CLARIBEL.

BEAUTY AND YOU

BY VIOLA PARIS

DEAR VIOLA PARIS: What can I do to stop dandruff? It seems to make no difference how often I wash or brush my hair, I still have the dandruff. The flakes are very small and, while it is only once in a while that my scalp itches, it is always very dry. I work in an office and can not afford expensive scalp treatments, even if I had the time.

Answer: With systematic care, dandruff is really not difficult to control. First, attention should be given to the general health. A run-down condition, faulty elimination and poor circulation are as certain to be reflected in the scalp as in any other part of the skin surface.

Perhaps you are washing your hair too often. This will only aggravate your trouble with scalp like yours should not shampoo the hair more often than once every two weeks, not even as frequently as that unless it is absolutely necessary for cleanliness. I suggest the following treatment three or four hours before the shampoo.

Part the hair in the center and subdivide it into small sections. With a fine-toothed comb, comb out each strand. After the combing, thoroughly brush the loosened dandruff from the hair. Now warm a little olive oil and with a medicine dropper or a small piece of absorbent cotton, apply the oil along each part until the entire scalp has been covered.

Wring out a towel with hot water and wrap it closely about the head, leaving it on until it cools. Repeat the hot towel applications two or three times. After the last towel, massage the scalp well for a few minutes and follow with the shampoo.

Make a habit of brushing your hair thoroughly and of massaging your scalp every night before retiring.

YOUR BOY AND YOUR GIRL

High School Valedictories.

WHY should many high school valedictories be a collection of stereotyped platitudes?

So asks a girl who says: "The valedictory at our graduation is always the same, always enumerating the difficulties which students have in going through school and then telling how grateful we are to the teachers and parents who have helped to smooth out the difficulties. Of course, we appreciate everything and everybody, but the audience has heard it so often that when the valedictorian begins the only persons who are not in dread and despair are the valedictorian's fond papa and mamma."

"This year it is my honor (or duty) to deliver the address and I am anxious to break away from such a hackneyed rut. There must be something else which I can present. Can't you make a suggestion?"

I have written this girl direct, but reproduce the essence of my reply because of popular interest. A valedictorian's audience would much prefer to hear the student's views of an absorbing subject. For one thing the audience would like to know the opinions of youth regarding the restrictions of school life and the limitations of the youth's own life.

We hear a great deal about the cynical youth of today; some tell us that youth, today, is hard-boiled, that they have tasted all that life offers and see nothing ahead, that they don't know their terms and what is worse they don't care.

My readers know what little patience I have with this sort of chatter because, though it applies to a few, they are such a very small part of the whole. Contrast it with what was recently said by a man who sees the future of boys at close range, President Hopkins of Dartmouth: "There was never a generation with more frankness, honesty, generosity and—yes—earnestness, than the present."

But we aren't stopping to argue the matter now. Why not show in your valedictory that President Hopkins is right by setting forth the attitude which most young people take toward their surroundings and things in general, an attitude which you, being one of them, can present better than anyone else? Point out that the world is really only a few who don't take a bright outlook and expect to make themselves useful beings; only a few who are so sure of themselves that they are with all life before them. It will be more convincing when it comes from you.

Explain just what some of these opinions of youth mean. Prove its earnestness and frankness and honest thought with cynicism. Point out that the valedictorian is merely clear thinking which breaks through hampering fabrications and prejudices.

Do more than defend youth. Make your speech constructive by presenting youth's own opinions. Presented in your own words, you will find your audience sitting up and listening, rather than slumping down and yawning.

OUR CONVERSATION CORNER.
Feeding the Waste Basket.

I sent a post card to you requesting "Why Study Latin?" leaflet. Why didn't you send it? DOUBTING.

Answer—I gladly give readers services solely with the compliments of this newspaper but I can not afford to retype to over 2,000 people who asked for this leaflet when they failed to enclose the very necessary self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Developing Inferiority Complex.

What are the chief evils of marking children in school? A TEACHER.

Answer—Striving for a mark and not for development. Focus on materialistic rather than idealistic. Unwholesome competition, etc. But the chief evil is the possible development of an inferiority complex. The child who is below the average is kept keenly aware of his deficiencies. Frequently he is pitied by the teacher; in the past that abomination, the dunce cap, was even used as the visual evidence of his inferiority. The result is that he is apt to go on in life with a morbidly intensified feeling of inferiority because of a false idea that everybody can possess all-around superiority.

HONORS ARE AWARDED

A man may go from good to bad and from bad to worse and yet be scarcely conscious of the change, was the warning given by Dr. Clarence A. Barbour, president of Rochester Theological Seminary, to the graduating class of Georgetown University at the baccalaureate services yesterday at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church.

"So silently and so mystically rises the temple of the soul," Dr. Barbour said, "that our characters develop and we scarcely know that we are growing better or our characters decay and we are just as blind to what is passing."

"A man may relinquish all the fresh dreams of youth, he may lose faith in the saving principles and the sound moralities of life, his soul may become as a ruined temple and yet he may be scarcely conscious of the change."

"Other men see it when he does not see it not at all himself. Had there been a voice from heaven to warn him of such successive stages of his decline, he would have known it. But there was nothing of the kind."

Dr. Barbour likened the silent constructive forces which are at work in the world to the building and prolonging of Solomon when "there was neither hammer nor ax nor any tool of iron heard in the house."

Ancestry, environment and schools, according to Dr. Barbour, are the quarries whence comes the stone for the building of character. "To put the stone in place, the quarryman must follow the line of the quarry, to face serious and staggering intellectual problems, to be de-feated and yet struggle on, to fall and rise again, to plant your foot in the forward march when surrender is in your heart, to take up your cross until God's will be done, that is the only way by which character can be formed," Dr. Barbour concluded.

COOLIDGE WILL ADDRESS U. S. OFFICIALS TONIGHT

Talk on Economy to Government Chiefs May Be His Last of the Kind.

OTHER PROGRAMS LISTED

Those who want to hear the real Calvin Coolidge at his best will do well to tune in on the broadcast of the address of the President before the fifteenth meeting of the business organization of the Government at 7 o'clock tonight through Station WRC. For here he will be talking economy—a subject upon which he thinks, and acts, and thrives.

Economy and efficient management have been the pose of statesmen since the beginning of our Government, but never, probably, has anybody believed in it, worked at it more consistently, or was more capable of its administration than President Coolidge. It will be one thing for which his administration will be remembered. And his address tonight may be one of his last upon this subject. The President will give a resume of what has been accomplished during the past year and what may be reasonably expected during the next.

The immediate audience in Memorial Continental Hall will be the heads and assistant heads of Government departments. If they are not statesmen, what he has to say, it won't be because the President has not given his very best thought to the subject. It will also be his final speech from Washington before departing for his summer vacation.

This program will be preceded by a half hour of band music by the United States Marine Band.

A joint recital by George Beuther, barytone, and Katherine Hill Rawlin, pianist, will be broadcast from the studio station WRC at 8 o'clock tonight. A half hour's program of the music of India will be presented in the Family Party at 8:30 o'clock.

The march from Goussou, "Queen of Sheba," an opera of ancient Babylonian days, will open the slumber music at 10 o'clock. Ludwig Laurie will direct the string section in other numbers, such as "Rosebud," by Harold Sanford, Lacombe's "Aubade a Ninon," a selection from Smetana's "The Bartered Bride," Handel's "Largo" and Herbert's "Indian Lullaby."

A play-by-play account of the Washington-Cleveland baseball game will be broadcast at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

"Great Britain" will be the subject of James G. McDonald at 6 o'clock.

An outdoor concert from the United States Capitol will be played by the United States Navy Band, under the conductorship of Lieut. Charles Benter at 7:30 o'clock through station WMAU.

"Interesting Theaters of the World" will be the subject of a talk by Colby Hartman. "Musical moments with famous piano artists" will be a short feature at 10 o'clock.

A household talk, the household economy and lost and found features will be broadcast from WRC during the morning.

CENTRAL MISSION FUND CAMPAIGN NEAR CLOSE

Final Meeting Will Be Held at the City Club Tonight Success Expected.

CHURCHES TAKING PART

After ten days of strenuous campaigning, the Central Union Mission's drive to raise funds to pay off the $24,710 debt on its men's building, will close at 6 o'clock tonight at a dinner in the City Club at which division leaders will make their final reports on contributions.

Carrying their appeal to the churches of the city yesterday, the 300 team workers met with wide cooperation, and the hope was entertained that tonight's closing meeting would be in the nature of a "victory" celebration. When the last report was announced, the sum of $17,000 remained to be raised.

Chairman E. H. De Groot, Jr., will get reports from Dr. Everett M. Ellison, commander of the men's division; Mrs. John S. Bennett, who heads the women's division, and Samuel W. Cookrell, leader of the Mount Vernon Place M. E. Church South group. Many of the churches besides Mount Vernon are participating actively through efforts of Bible classes and other organizations.

E. M. Willes, a director of the Central Union Mission, will be one of the principal speakers at tonight's meeting.

In a final appeal, issued last night, Chairman De Groot expressed the hope that the mission would be able to retire forever from the campaign business by wiping out its indebtedness at this time.

"If every church member in Washington would contribute to the campaign fund of their mission," he said, "there would be no need to extend this appeal beyond the scheduled date of its close."

ENVOYS ARE FLOUTED BY CHINESE GENERAL

here today and caused great anxiety as to the safety of these troops.

One report was that two of Pao's colonels had suffered death before a firing squad this morning, but this was not confirmed. Another related to a plot for the kidnapping of Gen. Pao with the result that he took refuge in the foreign legation quarters. Other refugees thronged into the legation area from railroad trains, marooned in the city and hotels. Among them were the second wife of Emperor Kwang Hsu with her retinue and princess-daughters and the sister of the boy emperor.

Causes Chiang's Resignation.

Shanghai, China, June 10 (A.P.).—The imbroglio in which the diplomatic body at Peking has become involved with Feng Yu-Hsiang, coupled with discouragement because of intrigues among leaders of victorious southern China, were given tonight as the real reason for the resignation of Gen. Chiang Kai-shek as commander-in-chief of the Nationalist military council. Friends of Gen. Chiang had their tongues in their cheeks when they mentioned his ostensible reason for resigning—that there was no need of a generalissimo now that the capture of Peking had been effected.

With Chiang out of office, Feng Yu-Hsiang is the dominating figure in China.

Feng's nominee as Nationalist foreign minister, C. T. Wang, assumes his portfolio tomorrow. He has stated that he will pursue a "strong attitude" toward foreigners and in view of this it is predicted here that the disarming of Gen. Pao Yu-Lin's soldiers will receive only scant attention, despite the diplomatic protest. It is believed, also, that the Nanking government is powerless to act.
